

At the January 13, 2021 Annual Meeting, the Saskatchewan Seed Growers' Association welcomed two new directors to their Board – Lyndon Stoll and Adam Littman – and bid farewell to two directors – Cathy Fedoruk and Wanda Jones.

Welcome

New to the SSGA Board of Directors are Lyndon Stoll of Saskatoon and Adam Littman of Saltcoats.

Lyndon Stoll grew up on a pedigreed seed farm near Delisle SK. He is a fourth-generation contributor to the farm, always searching to marry the lessons of the past with emerging, progressive techniques. In his youth, he was active in the Laura Multiple 4-H Club. He obtained a Diploma in Agriculture from the University of Saskatchewan, spent a year as a farm trainee in Australia and New Zealand, and returned to complete a Degree in Agriculture (majoring in Agronomy) from the University of Saskatchewan. As a Professional Agrologist, he currently works with diverse farms types across Saskatchewan.

Lyndon's interest in joining the Board is to become more familiar with the issues facing the industry now – and in the near future – and to contribute to decisions that are in the best interests of seed growers.

Adam Littman was raised on a pedigreed seed farm in the Saltcoats area, with deep family connections to the Saskatchewan Seed Growers' Association. He held leadership positions in the Saltcoats 4-H Equestrian Club and continues to be an active volunteer in his community. He received a Degree in Agriculture, majoring in Agricultural Economics, from the University of Saskatchewan. Through his work as a sales representative, he maintains his connection with commercial producers, the ultimate consumer for pedigreed seed growers.

Adam is very familiar with what SSGA represents. His goal in becoming a director is to help retain the excellent standing of the SSGA and to become more knowledgeable about the current initiatives in the seed industry and the implications for individual seed growers.

Welcome Lyndon and Adam!

Farewell

Leaving the Board are Cathy Fedoruk and Wanda Jones.

Cathy Fedoruk joined the Board of Directors in 2011 and progressed through the executive positions, leaving us as her tenure as Past President is now completed. Cathy always ensured everyone was able to express their opinions. Her calm and quiet contemplation kept the Board focused. Her work on policies and governance has laid a good basis for SSGA to build upon.

Wanda Jones was elected to the Board of Directors in 2017. Wanda brought plenty of board experience to the table and always provided thought-provoking comments and questions. Her candour around the table was very much appreciated and helped the Board to examine issues from multiple perspectives.

Both contributed significantly to the smooth workings of the Board of Directors and will be missed. Thanks again to Cathy and Wanda.
